

CROP International Studies in Poverty Prize 2017

The Comparative Research Programme on Poverty (CROP), in co-operation with Zed Books, requests proposals for the CROP International Studies in Poverty Prize 2017.

We seek proposals for original, high quality, alternative and critical academic book manuscripts. Works challenging the dominant thinking and knowledge about poverty and providing sound contributions to the eradication and/or prevention of poverty are especially welcomed.

Poverty must be the central focus of the proposed manuscripts. Innovative proposals are accepted from all disciplines of the social sciences and the humanities. CROP is especially (but not exclusively) interested in the themes of Poverty and Human Rights, Gender Disparity, Policy Innovation and Global Justice.

CLOSING DATE FOR SUBMISSION OF PROPOSALS: 31 July 2017

The winner of the CROP International Studies in Poverty Prize 2017 will receive a monetary award equivalent to NOK 50 000. The manuscript will be published by Zed Books in the CROP International Studies in Poverty series. The winner will also receive 10 complimentary copies of the book.

For further entry guidelines please see reverse.

CROP International Studies in Poverty Prize 2017

The Comparative Research Programme on Poverty (CROP), in co-operation with Zed Books, requests proposals for the CROP International Studies in Poverty Prize 2017.

We seek proposals for original, high quality, alternative and critical academic book manuscripts. Works challenging the dominant thinking and knowledge about poverty and providing sound contributions to the eradication and/or prevention of poverty are especially welcomed.

Poverty must be the central focus of the proposed manuscripts. Innovative proposals are accepted from all disciplines of the social sciences and the humanities. CROP is especially (but not exclusively) interested in the themes of Poverty and Human Rights, Gender Disparity, Policy Innovation and Global Justice.

CLOSING DATE FOR SUBMISSION OF PROPOSALS: 31 July 2017

The winner of the CROP International Studies in Poverty Prize 2017 will receive a monetary award equivalent to NOK 50 000. The manuscript will be published by Zed Books in the CROP International Studies in Poverty series. The winner will also receive 10 complimentary copies of the book.

For further entry guidelines please see reverse.

Entry guidelines

Proposals should be original and written in the English language.

They should not have been published partially or in full in any format, including electronically.

To submit an entry please complete a full book proposal.

Submission guidelines can be found at:
<http://www.crop.org/Publications/CROP-Prize/>

All entries will undergo a blind, fair and unbiased review by a panel of international judges.

The result of the competition will be announced simultaneously on the CROP and Zed Books websites in late 2017.

ZED

About CROP (crop.org)

The Comparative Research Programme on Poverty is a programme of the International Social Science Council (ISSC), hosted by the University of Bergen and devoted to supporting independent, alternative and critical knowledge and learning that can inform policy.

About Zed Books (ZedBooks.net)

Zed Books is an independent academic publisher with a reputation for cutting-edge international publishing.

For editorial norms and additional information, please see www.crop.org or contact us at crop@uib.no

Entry guidelines

Proposals should be original and written in the English language.

They should not have been published partially or in full in any format, including electronically.

To submit an entry please complete a full book proposal.

Submission guidelines can be found at:
<http://www.crop.org/Publications/CROP-Prize/>

All entries will undergo a blind, fair and unbiased review by a panel of international judges.

The result of the competition will be announced simultaneously on the CROP and Zed Books websites in late 2017.

ZED

About CROP (crop.org)

The Comparative Research Programme on Poverty is a programme of the International Social Science Council (ISSC), hosted by the University of Bergen and devoted to supporting independent, alternative and critical knowledge and learning that can inform policy.

About Zed Books (ZedBooks.net)

Zed Books is an independent academic publisher with a reputation for cutting-edge international publishing.

For editorial norms and additional information, please see www.crop.org or contact us at crop@uib.no