

Editorial

Two years ago, in 1992, the General Assembly of the International Social Science Council accepted the CROP Plan-of-action developed by an interim committee, and elected the first CROP Standing Committee. In December 1994 a new General Assembly will take place, and CROP will be invited to present its plans for the next two years.

This is a good opportunity to look at the past CROP activities with critical eyes, and to learn from our experiences made so far.

The emphasis has been on arranging meeting places for scholars working with poverty issues, and trying to create an organisational structure which facilitates networking across countries and disciplines. So far eight workshops/seminars/ conferences have been arranged within CROP, plus several sessions on poverty within other academic settings. A secretariat has been established, a newsletter is making its way around the world, and a first publication of papers based on a CROP workshop is under preparation.

So where do we go from here? Do we want more of the same? Or do we want to move in new directions? Are we ready to engage in research projects under the CROP umbrella, or should we continue to support projects under other umbrellas? Is the idea of a travelling college in the methodology of poverty research, ripe for a committee to start working on? Do any of you have proposals for small regional workshops on poverty topics close to your hearts? All ideas which will further the interests of comparative poverty research, and which CROP can help materialize, are welcome.

The next Plan-of-action will be under preparation during the month of October, and you are all invited to bring forward ideas and bring your expertise into the Plan. CROP is a vehicle for all those interested in poverty research, and the Plan should reflect just that.

The Workshop is a joint enterprise between CROP and Instituto Universitário de Pesquisas do Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. Professor Elisa P. Reis, IUPERJ, is responsible.

Papers will analyze how strategic actors such as the bureaucracy, entrepreneurs, politicians, intellectuals, religious leaders, and the military view poverty, inequality, distribution of resources and their own policy making.

* CROP/UNESCO Scientific Symposium on: "The Regional State-of-the-Art-Reviews on Poverty Research"

November 30th to December 2nd, 1994, Paris, France.
Please note: That the date for this event has been forwarded to November the 30th!

The purpose of the reviews is to develop a research instrument for researchers working on comparative poverty studies. The reviews will provide insight into regional differences in the study of poverty, give an overall view of the variety of concepts, hypotheses and methodologies in use, identify results of a more general nature, and present the authors' qualified evaluation of the present state of the art and future path of comparative research to follow.

More than twenty researchers and research groups have prepared regional reviews which will be presented during the symposium.

CROP in brief

CROP is a world-wide network of researchers and experts on poverty. The aim of CROP is to establish an arena for interdisciplinary and comparative research on poverty in developed and developing countries.

CROP organizes regional workshops, symposia and international conferences, promotes joint research projects, links poverty researchers and disseminates information about poverty research.

CROP is developing an international database on poverty researchers, and documentation of ongoing research and of available data sources.

If you wish to have your name listed in CROPNET, you are welcome to write the CROP Secretariat and request a copy of the CROP Database Questionnaire.
